

GEORGE DADAMO

new solutions. fresh ideas. real leadership.

Meet George

Born on November 03, 1953 in Windsor, Ontario, George Dadamo's life is that of the Canadian dream. Beginning over half a century ago when his father came to Canada from Italy; with nothing more than the clothes on his back and a mere ten dollars in his pocket, George's father sought a better life, in a nation that offered its people freedom and opportunity.

At eight years old, George got his first job, delivering the local newspaper to surrounding streets in his community. It was a tough gig for the scrawny kid, but he was taught at an early age the value of hard work and perseverance.

In 1973, at the age of twenty, George began a successful career as a radio broadcaster - first in Windsor with CKLW/CKWW, later his career would take him right across western Canada, to places like Regina, Saskatchewan and Kamloops, British Columbia.

In 1992, George was awarded the Medal for the 125th Anniversary of Canada, approved by Her Majesty The Queen, the award honoured Canadians who have made a significant contribution to their fellow citizens, to their community and to Canada.

As a legislator and community organizer, George has spent his entire adult life fighting for the values we share as Albertans. He has worked to enhance universal healthcare, toughened laws for repeat violent offenders and has helped strengthen economies and created thousands of jobs.

From time to time, George gets asked where he gets the energy and determination to stand up and keep fighting. He says it comes from being an optimist and believing things will get better for all people – if we roll up our sleeves and work together. It's an optimism that comes from faith, from family and from his belief in individual responsibility. It's why George Dadamo is optimistic for the future of Calgary and our province.

George has never forgotten his humble roots and remains committed to the values that have made Canada and Alberta the envy of the world. His continued service to the nation and our community is defined by his tireless commitment to its citizens, a fundamental belief in the goodness of our people, and a rock-solid commitment to the core principles that we all share as Albertans.

As a devoted father and grandfather, George Dadamo brings the forward-looking agenda, optimistic spirit, and independent leadership necessary to strengthen our economy, make our streets safer and move Alberta forward into the 21st Century.
